

China International Talent Exchange Foundation

CITEF

The China International Talent Exchange Foundation (CITEF) is a non-profit organization authorized by the Chinese government to provide fund support and related services to promote international talent exchange and cooperation. The foundation is managed by the State Administration of Foreign Experts Affairs (SAFEA). The current director of CITEF is Su Guangming. The fund comes from government grants and social donations to support and promote international talent exchange and cooperation between Chinese government departments, enterprises, research and development institutions, universities and various social organizations.

The goal of CITEF is to rely on the leadership and support of the SAFEA to become an important source of the country's intellectual capital, an important support for the introduction of highly skilled talents and an important platform for international personnel exchange and financing. In terms of accelerating diversification of needs, with the apparent call for the direction of intellectual resources, the foundation is looking to become an important means of solving the contradiction between the limited growth of government-led funds and the increasing demand for intellectual assistance.

The foundation is in charge of raising, managing and operating various special funds, employing foreign experts, organizing overseas trainings, supporting research and development of high-tech industries, providing consultation on international talent exchange service, etc.

CITEF undertakes many projects, including personnel overseas training projects, and the work of the National Software and IC talents International Training Base (IT Base Project), Global Logistics Management Program certification and the Belt and Road International Education Base.
